COMPRENSION LECTORA

British education expert Anthony Seldon thinks robots also have a place in education. He even has a date for the robot takeover of the classroom: 2027. He predicts robots will do the main job of transferring information and teachers will be like assistants. Intelligent robots will read students' faces and maybe even brain signals. They will adapt the information to each student. It is not a popular opinion and it is unlikely robots will ever have empathy and the ability to really connect with humans like another human can.

However, a robot teacher is better than no teacher at all. In some parts of the world, there aren't enough teachers and ten per cent of the children under the age of 14 don't go to school. That problem could be partly solved by robots because they can teach anywhere and don't get stressed, or move somewhere for a better-paid job.

Those negative aspects of teaching are something everyone agrees on. Teachers all over the world are leaving because it is a difficult job and they feel overworked. Perhaps the question is not 'Will robots replace teachers?' but 'How can robots help teachers?' Office workers can use software to do things like organize and answer emails, arrange meetings and update calendars. Teachers waste a lot of time doing non-teaching work, including more than 11 hours a week marking homework. If robots could cut the time teachers spend marking homework and writing reports, teachers would have more time and energy for the parts of the job humans do best.
